SECOND WIND SUNDRIES
Danilo Brakočević

"Can a city be encapsulated in one object, or is it always a multitude? Could this object be carried without anyone knowing how valuable it is? What happens when we find out?"

Objects' life, as well as our relationship with those possible lives, are the central elements of Danilo Brakočević's exhibition. Through an immersive visual experience and the use of ready-made objects, Second Wind Sundries creates a landscape of intentions enclosed in everyday objects. Objects found by searching the city's markets: a central element in the installation, given the crossover of experiences that they entail, both in a social, cultural and economic sense. These objects may not appear to have a special value on their own, but through their exploration and re-contextualization, other possible narratives emerge, creating new lives and imaginaries.

Second Wind: a love letter to a flea market
Multilayered glass sheet sculpture pays homage to the golden roof of Les Encants Market, designed by b720 Arquitectos. In the artist's own words "it resembles a golden sail and it degrades into small particles alluding to the perishable nature of objects."

Sundries. A Book.
Stories of chosen objects will be collected in a unique artist book, where each story will have its specific representation on the wall.
